We are looking to hire a Senior Interpersonal Violence Prevention (IVP) Coordinator. The Senior IVP Coordinator is responsible for the development, implementation and evaluation of comprehensive, culturally informed and evidence-based sexual assault and interpersonal violence primary prevention programs and services for the university community, with a focus on bystander intervention and on underserved populations. Primary duties include managing intervention program; serving as an advisor and liaison for the peer leader program; serving as the main contact for University 101 programs; supervising the Interpersonal Violence Program Coordinator; programming and collaborating with on and off-campus constituents on outreach activities to students, faculty, and staff; interpersonal violence advocacy to include on-call duties; facilitating other presentations and trainings as assigned. The Senior IVP Coordinator will lead the development of strategic plans, goals and measurable objectives for violence prevention programs and services for the Sexual Assault Violence Intervention & Prevention (SAVIP) program. Collaborates with departmental and campus colleagues to plan, implement, and evaluate theory- and evidence-informed prevention strategies. Utilizing current and relevant research, develops and implements educational programs and services designed to increase the number of active bystanders on campus. All outreach efforts include a focus on the following populations: LGBTQ+, people of color, males, international students, students with disabilities, and veterans. Responsible for SAVIP presentation submission and oversight for the university's freshman seminar course. Trains, directs, and supervises others performing various tasks associated with the delivery of programs and services, including staff, students, graduate assistants/interns and peer educators. Position will rotate on-call after hours and on weekends and perform advocacy duties during office hours to respond to sexual assaults and other forms of interpersonal violence. Position will manage a limited caseload including maintaining case files and responding to correspondence and telephone inquiries, developing a comprehensive plan of the client's service and advocacy needs, attending meetings and hearings as requested and referring to campus and community partners as appropriate.

Minimum Qualifications: Master's degree in health education, health promotion, or related field and 3 year experience or bachelor's degree in health education, health promotion or related field and 5 years related experience.

Preferred Qualifications: Demonstrated background in evidence-based program planning and implementation. Experience with applying issues of diversity and social justice to prevention practice strongly preferred. Ability to speak to large audiences and facilitate small group discussions. Experience with bystander intervention training and/or training and advising peer educators strongly preferred. Knowledge of theories/models associated with interpersonal violence including but not limited to socioecological, feminist, social justice, as well as experience with trauma-informed care models,
